

Historical geographer Anne Kelly Knowles is Colonel James C. McBride Distinguished Professor of History at the University of Maine, where she directs the Digital and Spatial History Lab and leads the Holocaust Ghettos Project. For more than thirty years she has been a leader in historical GIS and geovisualization for the humanities and social sciences. Anne's books include Past Time, Past Place: GIS for History (2002), Placing History (2008), Mastering Iron (2013), and Geographies of the Holocaust (2014). She is a founding member of the Holocaust Geographies Collaborative. In addition to major grants from the National Science Foundation and National Endowment for the Humanities, her research garnered the American Ingenuity Award for Historical Scholarship from Smithsonian magazine (2012) and a Guggenheim Fellowship (2015).