

National Museum of African American History and Culture

Join educators at the National Museum of African American History and Culture to experience a virtual tour of selected museum collections and stories. With a focus on the historical element of place, this tour will examine how the concept of place has defined the African American experience and how various places have defined the African American experience. This tour will highlight places such as the Carolina low country, Philadelphia, PA, and Oak Bluff, MA among others. After the virtual tour, there will be a Q&A session to invite discussion on the impact of place in a community's story.
